Choice Poetry.

THE BONDHOLDERS SONG.

The bondholder sat in his easy chair,
Counting his bonds was he;
And he turned up his nose at Seymour and Blair,
And called them a terrible traitorous pair,
While he sang to himself in glee.

"The people are saddled for us to ride,
Ah! booted and spurred are we;
We crawl well every panting side,
And as safe on their brawny backs abide
As Sinbad's Old Man of the Sea.

"We gave them paper for what we loaned,
At not quite half of the face;
But we'll get full payment in gold, hard gold,
(Though laboring men are bought and sold,)
If we only win this race!

"The war is over—some folks say,
But certainly that won't do;
We must keep it up till election day,
(Till then at least we can make it pay,)
Hurrah for the Red, White and Blue!

"Hurrah for that glorious hero, Grant;
The bondholder's choice is he;
He'll speak if he could, but luckily he can't,
And the masses won't know what a regular plant
A glorious hero can be.

"I have misgivings, I must confess,
That we can't put the ticket through;
That the people at last are beginning to guess
A national blessing is a blessing to bless
A 'ring' of a chosen few.

"But away with misgivings, for who can prevent
The 'loyal' from getting their pay?
It is only three hundred and fifty per cent
On every dollar of paper they lent
Toward keeping the war under way!

"Hurrah for the flag of our country, then,
For writer, on every fold,
I see inscribed by Jay Cooke's pen
'Down with rebels,' which means all men
Who won't pay our bonds in gold!"

Miscellaneous.

ESCAPE FROM JUSTICE.

IT was a bitter night in January—a night when homeless wanderers on the moors might have sunk down froze to the earth, and the very marrow seemed to congeal in one's bones.

"There is one advantage in steam," growled a fat old gentleman in the corner seat; "wind and weather don't affect it. No flesh and blood horse could stand a night like this, but the iron horse keeps straight ahead, whether the thermometer is at zero or at boiling water heat."

Just then the conductor entered.

"Tickets, gentlemen, if you please."

"It's a dreadful night, conductor," I said, feeling with stiffened fingers for my ticket, in the breast pocket of my coat."

"Dreadful, sir!" feelingly responded the conductor. "Why, the breakemen can't live outside, and so I look the other way when they creep in, poor fellows, to get a breath of warm air at the stove. We haven't had such a night since a year ago come the second of February, when Tom Blakeslee, the baggage master, froze both his feet, and a woman who was coming from Chicago got off at Blinn's Four Corners with her baby in her arms a corpse!"

"I frozen to death!"

"Aye, frozen to death; and she never thought, poor thing, but that it was asleep. 'My baby's cold,' says she, 'but we'll soon warm it when we get home.' It was just such a night as this."

And the conductor opened the door and plunged across the coupling into the next car, crying out—

"Hardwick!"

It was quite a considerable city—with a handsome iron depot, flaring gas lamps, and the usual crowd around the platform, with hands in pockets, and cigar ends flaming through the night.

Our car was nearly the last of the long train, and but a single person entered it—a slender young girl, wrapped in a gray blanket shawl, and wearing a neat little traveling hat of gray straw, trimmed with stone-colored velvet flowers. She seemed to hesitate, like one used to traveling, and finally sat down near the door.

"Pardon me, young lady," said I, "but you had better come nearer the stove."

She started, hesitated a minute, and then obeyed.

"Does this train to to Bayswater?" she asked, in a voice so deliciously soft and sweet that it seemed to thrill through me.

"Yes; can I be of any service to you?"

"Oh, no—at least not until we reach Bayswater. I would like a carriage then.

"We shall not be there yet these three hours."

"Do we stop again?"

"Only at Exmouth."

She drew a deep sigh, seemingly of relief, and settled back in a corner. By the light of the lamp that hung its brass fixture opposite, I could see her face, that of a lovely child. Apparently she was no more than sixteen with large blue eyes, golden hair drawn straight away from her face, and a little rosy mouth like that of a baby.

"Do you expect friends to meet you at Bayswater, my child?" I asked incidentally.

"No, sir—I am going to school there."

"It will be an awkward hour for you to arrive by yourself—one in the morning."

"Oh, I am not afraid," she said with an artless little laugh; "I shall go straight to the Seminary."

So the express train thundered on, with steady, ceaseless pulsing at its iron heart, and constant roar.

Suddenly the signal whistle sounded, the train began to slack its speed.

"Surely we're not at Exmouth yet," I thought, "unless I have fallen unconsciously asleep and allowed the progress of time to escape me."

I glanced at my watch; it was barely half past eleven, and I knew we were not due at Exmouth until a few minutes after twelve. I rubbed the frost from the window pane and looked out.

We had stopped at a lonely little way station in the midst of the dense pine woods.

"Is this Exmouth?"

It was the soft voice of the pretty traveler opposite.

"No, I don't know what place it is—some way station."

"Does this train stop at way stations?"

"Never, generally; they must have been special signalled here. You are cold, my child; your voice trembles."

"It is cold," she said in a scarcely audible voice, drawing her shawl around her. "Oh, how I wish they would hurry on!"

"Conductor!"—for the man of tickets was passing through the car—"why did we stop at the backwoods place?"

"Out of water," was the reply, as he hurriedly passed by.

Now I knew perfectly well that this answer was not the true solution of the matter. Our delay had not exceeded half a minute, altogether too short a time for replenishing the boiler; and where on earth was the water to come from in that desolate stretch of barren pine woods?"

Five minutes after the conductor reentered the car, and I made room for him at my side.

"Sit down, conductor you've nothing to do this minute."

He obeyed.

"What did you mean by telling me such a lie just now?"

I spoke under my breath; he replied in the same tone—

"About what?"

"About the reason you stopped just now."

He smiled.

"To tell you the truth, I stopped to take on a single passenger—a gentleman who has come down from Bayswater."

"For the pleasure of traveling once more over the same route?"

"Exactly sir for the pleasure of traveling it in certain society. Don't be alarmed for your own safety—it's a detective police man."

"A——"

I was about to repeat the words in astonishment, when he mentioned me to silence.

"And who is the offender?"

"I don't know myself yet. He does'nt want a scene until the moment of arrest; we are safe enough until we reach Bayswater."

"Where is he?"

"The detective? He sits by the door yonder, with a ragged fur cap pulled over his eyes. Did you ever see a more perfect specimen of the dilapidated countryman?"

I smiled; I could hardly help it.

"What is the case?

"A murder—a man and his wife and two children—their throat cut last night and the house set fire afterwards."

"Great Heavens? what a monster!"

We had continued the conversation in a whisper, scarcely above our breath, and now the conductor rose and left me to study the faces of my fellow passengers, with curious dread and horror.

Somehow, often as I revolved the matter in my mind, my fancy would settle on a coarse, gross-looking man opposite, with a bushy beard and a shaggy wool coat, with the collar turned up round his ears. I felt convinced that this man, with the brutal eyes, and the heavy hanging jaws, was the Cain; and as I looked furtively across, I caught the wide open blue orbs of the fair little girl.

Obeying the instantaneous impulse of my heart, I rose and went over to her.

"You heard what we were saying my little one?"

"Yes—a murder—oh, how horrible!"

"Do not be frightened—no one shall hurt you."

She smiled up in my face with sweet confiding innocence.

Our stay at Exmouth was but brief; but during the delay I could see that the detective had changed his seat to one nearer the brutish man in the shaggy coat.

"See," faltered the young girl; "they locked the car doors at Exmouth; they are unlocking them now."

She was right.

"Probably they were fearful that the criminal would escape." I remarked in an undertone.

"Will you—may I trouble you to bring me a glass of water?"

I rose and made way towards the ice cooler by the door, but with difficulty, for the train was again under rapid motion. To my disappointment the tin goblet was chained to the shelf.

"No matter," said she, with a winning smile, "I will come myself."

I drew the water and held the cup; but instead of taking it as she approached, she brushed suddenly past me, opened the door and rushed out upon the platform.

"Stop her! stop her!" shouted the detective springing to his feet. "She will be killed; conductor brakeman—hold up!"

There was a rush—a tumult—a bustle; I was first upon the platform; but it was empty and deserted, save by a half frozen looking brakeman, who seemed horror-stricken.

"She went past me like a shadow, and jumped off as we crossed Cairn turnpike road," he stammered.

"Jumped off the express train; well she must have been killed instantly.—What mad folly!" It's five hundred dollars out of my pocket, said the detective, ruefully. "I did got want a row before we got to Bayswater, but I was confounded fool. A woman coaxed will do anything, I believe?"

"Wha'," I ejaculated, "you surely do not mean that child——"

"I mean" said the detective calmly, "that child as you call her, is Attila Burton, married woman twenty-six years age, who last night murdered four persons in cold blood, and was trying to escape to Canada. That's what I mean"

The train was stopped, and a party of us, lead by the conductor and detective, went back to search for any trace of the beautiful young creature, whose loveliness and apparent innocence had appealed to my sympathies so earnestly. Nor was it long before we found her, lying quite dead by the side of the track, frightfully mangled by the force of the fall, and multilated almost beyond recognition.

"Well, she's escaped justice in this world if not in the next," said the detective gloomily, as he stood looking down upon her remains.

"Do you suppose she expected to be able to spring off the morning train without injury?" I asked.

"Without much injury—yes; women are such unreasoning creatures. But I never dreamed of such insane folly, or I should have taken prompt measures to prevent it."

They lifted up the fair dead thing, carried it to the nearest place of refuge—a lonely farm house among the frozen hills, and we returned to the train, reaching Bayswater only a few minutes behind our regular time.

And when in the next morning's papers, I read the account of the murderess, I thought of the slender creature's blue eyes, and rose-bud mouth, with a strange, pitying thrill at my heart.

THE GRAVE OF BRADDOCK.—Among the many things which time has brought to light is the answer to the oft-repeated query. "Who killed Braddock?" During that memorable retreat of the British and Provincial troops, Braddock ordered that his men should protect themselves behind trees. One Joseph Fausett presumed to disobey this order, when Braddock, in a passion struck him down with his sword. Tom. Fausett, who was but a short distance from his brother, saw the whole transaction, and immediately shot the General through the lungs. The Hon. A. Stewart, of Uniontown, Pa., says his father often heard Fausett acknowledge this. After Braddock fell, his body was carried by his troops for four days, when he expired. He was interred in the middle of the road, so that all of the soldiers wagons horses might pass over and obliterate all vestige of his grave from the eyes of the savages. About twenty-nine years ago some laborers, who were repairing the road, came upon the remains, and after taking a number of the most prominent bones, reinterred the others. Some time afterwards the scattered bones were collected and sent to Peal's Museum, which was in Philadelphia at the time. Braddock's grave is in Fayette county, Penna., and is marked by a plain shingle nailed to a tree, where part of the bones are interred. This is the only monument which serves to point out to the traveller, the last resting place of the proud and brave, but unfortunate victim of Indian warfare.

A REBEL ANECDOTE.—In the work by Jon Esten Cooke, entitled "Wearing of the Gray," the following anecdote occurs, which may perhaps be appreciated under the circumstances:

In 1863 the enemy caught an old countryman near Madison Court House, and informed him that he must do one of two things: either take the oath of allegiance to the United States government or prepare to be buried alive. He declined taking the oath, when his captors deliberately proceeded in his presence to dig a grave, and when it was finished they led him to it and said:

"Will you take the oath?

"No!" responded the prisoner.

"You had better."

"I won't."

"If you don't take the oath you will be buried alive in the next five minutes."

The old fellow approached nearer, looking with attention to the pit, yawning before him, and then, turning round, with his hands in his pockets valiantly replied:

"Go on with your d—d old funeral."

A MAIDEN lady, residing in seclusion, had not been to church for several years; but on the accession of a small family property, she bought herself a new bonnet, shawl and dress, with the appropriate gloves, boots, etc., and appeared on the following Sabbath in a style which almost destroyed her identity with the hitherto shabby and hopeless old maid. Just as she was walking up the aisle, and as every eye seemed turned upon her, the choir commenced singing an anthem, the burden of which was: "Hallelujah! hallelujah!" The indignant spinster retraced her steps down the aisle, in high dudgeon, exclaiming: "Hardly know you!" indeed. Why, this is not the first time I've been dressed up. 'Hardly know you!' I guess I don't come here again very soon!"

A VERY heavy fog lince visited the State of Massachusetts, which probably somewhat surpassed the fogs of the city of London. A young man was sent out to the meadow to nail a few courses of shingles on a barn the roof of which was nearly finished. "At dinner," said the farmer, who is responsible for the story "the fellow came up and sez that's a mighty long barn of your'n.' Sez I, 'not very long.' 'Well,' sez he, 'I've been to work all this forenoon and have not got one course laid yet.' 'Well,' sez I, 'you are a devlish lazy fellow, thats all I have got to say.' So after dinner I went down to see what he had been about, and I'll be thundered if he had n't shingled more than a hundred feet right out on the fog!"

NEVER TOOK THE OATH.—At Richmond, Virginia, a modest country girl, on applying for rations to one of the relief agents, was asked if she had ever taken the oath. "No, indeed, sir," said the girl, 'mother always taught me never to swear." The agent mildly persisted and the maiden as pertinaciously refused all attempts at persuasion, until, overcome at last by the dreadful conflict between necessity and her high sense of moral duty, she stammered out, with downcast lids. "Well, sir, if you make me do such a horrid, wicked thing, then d—n the Yankees!"

A LADY was once conversing with a sailor who had suffered shipwreck; and as she took great pleasure in the analyzation of feelings and emotions, asked him compassionately, "How did you feel, my dear man, when the cold waves broke over you?" But the seaman knew nothing of metaphysics, and answered simply, "Wet, ma'am; very wet."

A Thrilling Sketch.

IN the year 1830, the inhabitants living in a district bordering on Rock River, in the northern part of the State of Illinois, were much incensed by the depredations of a band of horse thieves who infested that portion of the country. Every exertion had been made to discover the men engaged in the nefarious business, but hitherto, in vain, and valuable animals were stolen, and lost to their owners, in defiance of the utmost vigilance and care.

During such a state of affairs, the citizens residing in the region of the thieves became thoroughly excited, and were wound up in such a pitch of indignation, that a body of men were formed styled Rangers, whose explicit duty was to expunge the district of all suspicious characters, and endeavor to to put a stop to their depredations.

Shortly after this band commenced operations word was conveyed to the leader of the Rangers that a valuable horse which had been stolen the night previous, could then be found on the premises of a man named Burt, locked up in the stable. Although Burt heretofore had been looked upon as an honest man and an upright citizen, yet the Captain deemed it his duty to at least examine his farm and learn the truth or falsity of the report.

Accordingly he summoned some half dozen of his Rangers to meet him at a spot not far from Burt's house, and before morning, set out for the same place himself. Daylight was hardly discernable in the east, and the lazy light of coming dawn had not yet penetrated the bottom, where the suspected man resided, as the Rangers, charged with the fearful mission of life or death, silently approached, and surrounded the dwelling. Leaving three of the band to guard the entrance, the Captain and the other three went to the barn, opened the door, and found the missing horse, as had been stated safely stalled inside.

Not a lingering doubt now remained of Burt's guilt, and with a stern determination, to make an example of him that would deter others from a like transaction, the Rangers returned to the house. In the meantime, Burt had risen, and upon coming to the door, was seized by those in waiting, and upon demanding the reason was informed by them that a stolen animal was found in his stable, and that he was considered a thief. Muttering something about "he knew it would come to this at last," he quietly submitted to whatever his captors had in store for him.

A short consultation was held and it was resolved to hang the criminal upon a larg elm tree that grew in front of his own house, it being thought that such an act would strike terror and dismay into the ranks of the horse thieves.

Burt had asked half an hour to prepare for his death, and the sun had risen in all its golden majesty, ere the fatal moment had arrived which would launch him into eternity. In vain his grayheaded father and mother pleaded for his life, with trembling tongues—and kneeling in suppliant mood to his apparently merciless captors. In vian the wife of his bosom knelt in tears of agony, and intreated them as husbands spare his life; for each Ranger had suffered more or less in person and they deemed the example absolutely necessary to deter others, and it seemed as though Burt must die.

The dreadful preparations were completed—the half hour had expired—and the criminal was arranged under the limb of a stout elm, over which a rope was thrown one end being noosed around the prisoner's neck, and the other held by three of the Rangers.

Then came a moment of dreadful silence, that awful stillness which precludes the launching of a fellow-being into eternity—while the three strong men who held the rope's end gazed fixedly upon the Captain for the signal. It was given by raising the right arm; and already the noose was tightening around the doomed man's neck, when the wife of Burt issued forth from the house holding an infant, a little more than a year old, in her arms.

Rushing forward, she fell on her knees directly in front of the Captain, and raising the child with arms outstretched, toward him she exclaimed, in tones that would have pierced a heart of steel—

"If you will not spare him for the sake of his grayhared sire or the wife of his bosom, spare him in the name of God, for the sake of his infant boy!

Another dead silence reigned like a pall over the sp

The Columbian.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY MORNING, SEPT. 25, 1868.

☞ THE COLUMBIAN has the Largest Circulation in Columbia and adjoining counties of any paper published here, and is also a much larger sheet than any of its cotemporaries; and is therefore the best medium for advertising in this section of the State.

Attention! Democrats!!

IN order that cheap reading matter may be furnished the people until after the election, we make the following offer:

That we will send THE COLUMBIAN from now until after the Presidential election to clubs of twenty FOR FIVE DOLLARS. This is only Twenty five cents a number—and just covers the cost of the paper on which it is printed. The paper contains each week sixteen large columns of entertaining literary and political news.

No Democrat is so poor but what he can give twenty five cents to aid in the coming contest, and he should see that his Radical neighbor has a copy.

Clubs should be formed at every Post Office.

Col. Piollet.

THE Congressional nomination made at Danville, will gratify many personal friends of Col. Piollet in every county of our District. It was in our opinion, well-advised and believe will insure success. For there is a spirit of keen inquiry abroad, and the course of our present Representative in Congress has been unsatisfactory and in some respects odious. He has supported the most extreme measures by his votes, though he has been an instrument rather than a leader of party and has contributed nothing of value to the debates or proceedings of Congress.

Col. Piollet is a man of unusual energy, and his abilities are of a very respectable order. As a business man he has been very successful, and the large interests that have been confided to his charge, at several times, have been managed by him with signal skill and fidelity. Whether as Contractor or as Superintendant upon canal or rail-road improvements in Bradford and Wyoming counties, he has performed all his obligations to State and Corporation in a most satisfactory manner, while he has won the confidence and attachment of the citizens with whom he has been brought in contact by most honorable and just conduct towards them.

But it is at home, as Farmer and Merchant, that the Colonel appears most to advantage. He has the respect of all his neighbors, and will receive, very generally, their sincere support, not merely because he has ability and clear opinions upon public affairs, but because they know him to be a true man in all the relations of social and business life, and therefore presumably fitted for the ordeal of public service.

The Colonel becomes a candidate at this time, with particular reference to financial reform. The taxation of the people and the expenditure of the public monies are themes with which he is familiar and in which he feels a deep interest. He will, if elected, labor with diligence and zeal to reform taxation and reduce the public expenses, for he regards these as the most important subjects for consideration by Congress.

We shall take pleasure hereafter in enforcing the claims of Col. Piollet upon popular confidence. For he is a candidate to be supported with zeal and without distrust, and those who know his merit must not withhold their testimony in his favor.

More Work.

THERE is too little activity in Pennsylvania. All acknowledge it to be the battle ground. The Radicals have thrown into it their ablest debaters. What is the Democratic State Committee about that they have not drawn from New York and other States the brilliant orators who could render her effective service? The campaign ought to be aggressive, the issues are with us, the voters are with us, but the canvass will not proceed of itself. There are still three week, let them be weeks of herculean effort, of sleepless energy, and make our victory a Waterloo to the Radicals; destroying them as a political organization forever.

Maine.

THE election in Maine shows that the Democrats gained almost eight thousand votes to the hundred thousand. The whole vote is less than one hundred and thirty-five thousand. That is a tremendous gain. Apply the same ratio of increase to Pennsylvania, and we shall carry the State by fifty thousand. Are we making the same active and determined effort? We ought to do so, for our success is then overwhelming certain. In Maine all they could hope was to reduce majorities. Let us imitate Maine and her gallant Democracy.

FAILING to collect the illegal assessments made against the Democratic counties in the State, and not daring to test the question in the Courts; Radical Hartranft has given notice that he will keep back the appropriation made for common school purposes. So, as they can't steal any longer from full grown men, they propose to filch it from the little school children. Oh! the beauties of Radicalism! the party of great moral ideas, of all the decency and all the education, stealing the educational fund of the children. Is there any other fund they can get their fingers on before the people wipe them out? If there is, they'll be after it.

BONNER, of the Ledger, says if the the Republican party don't make more of Harm Sammy Grant than he (Bonner did out of the biography written by the old man, (Grant's father,) they will have made a bad investment. He paid the old man a good round sum for that biography, yet it some how or other it not only did not increase the circulation of the paper, but actually reduced it.

READING THEM OUT.—One year ago the New York Tribune said:

"Men who hold that none but Whites should vote, may be well enough in their place, but there is no room for them in the Republican party."

MASS MEETING AT BENTON.

Another Outpouring of the People!!

BANNERS, FLAGS & MUSIC.

THE meeting at Benton on Friday last, was a rouser and clearly indicates the interest the people feel in the coming contest. The Orangeville Brass Band was present, and flags and banners floated in all directions; showing the zeal of our friends in that section. We were glad to see our friend Aaron Patterson of Orange, there with a six horse team, loaded down with sturdy Democrats, it is, and we trust it will be imitated by others, not only during the contest, but especially on the day of election.

The stand was erected directly opposite Stiles' Hotel on the vacant lot, and all well and completely arranged. At about two o'clock order was called by the choice of the following officers: President, Peter Eat; Vice Presidents, J. L. Cary of Cumbra, E. N. Tubbs and Geo. Gearhart of Fairmount, Aaron Young and John Ikeler Benton, J. J. Rance and Wm. Ikeler of Fishingcreek Andrew Laubach and Jesse Hartman, of Sugarloaf, Aaron Patterson and Col. H. R. Kline of Orange, Iram Derr of Jackson. Secretaries, Chas. Conner, P. Call, J. J. Stiles, Silas W. M'Henry, C. B. M'Henry, S. Rhone.

Robert F. Clark, Esq., was then introduced, and was listened to with the most profound attention; not only, doubtless, on account of his ability as a speaker, but because of his well-known previous political position. His address was in all respects just what it should have been, and that is perhaps all we ought to say of it, not having taken any notes. Its effects upon those present, of the Radical party, cannot, of course, be known, but they could hardly listen to such a speech, and then go away perfectly satisfied that the principles and practices of their party are not antagonastic to the Government, as formed by Washington. If he did not show that, and further, that the Radical party does not hold the principles of the Republicans of '56, then all our ide as of logic are at fault. He was frequently applauded, and evidently gratified all present, not of the most extreme Radical pursuasion.

Col. Freeze followed—showing how the Radicals are ignoring the principles of Jefferson and carrying out those of the monarchist, Mr. Hamilton; how tyranical extravagant, and corrupt they are, and how necessary it is, that they should be driven from power.

Judge Derr was called for, and in his usual happy style gave us a song, and then after cheers for Seymour & Blair, for the Speakers, and for the Song, all prepared to return to their homes greatly delighted.

Congratulatory Address.

DEMOCRATIC STATE COM. ROOM, }
903 ARCH ST. PHILADELPHIA. }

To the Democracy of Pennsylvania:

THE sturdy Democracy of Maine have covered themselves with glory.

In the very citadel of Radicalism they have demonstrated that you are upon the eve of a magnificent victory.

The two parties were last arrayed at the polls upon national issues in 1866. Maine then polled a vote nearly equal to her vote of 1864, whilst Pennsylvania polled her largest vote.

In 1866 Radicalism received in Maine 69,637 votes. In 1868 it received, as they themselves estimate, 75,002 votes. This is an increase of 8 per cent. upon the vote of 1866.

In 1866 Democracy there received 41,947 votes, and in 1868 it receives 55,725 votes. This is an increase of 30 per cent. upon the vote of 1866.

In 1866 Radicalism received in Pennsylvania 307,274 votes, and Democracy received 290,096 votes.

Apply the test of Maine to this vote, and Radicalism will receive in Pennsylvania an increase of 8 per cent. or 24,581 votes, making a total of 331,855 votes, and Democracy will receive an increase of 30 per cent. or 87,028 votes, making a total of 377,124 Democratic votes, showing that we will have a clear Democratic majority of 45,269 votes.

Whilst the totals shown by this estimate are too large for the vote that we will cast in October, no man who knows the condition of public sentiment in Pennsylvania will assert that the relative proportion will be lessened.

Maine voted for John C. Fremont, yet James Buchanan was elected President, and Pennsylvania led the column of States that made him the Chief Executive of the nation.

The hope of the Republic is in the Democracy of the Keystone.

As in 1856, the responsibility of determining the contest now rests with you.

Maine has proven that you can again bring triumph to the principles you love.

Let us arouse to renewed energy and more determined effort.

By order of the Democratic State Committee.

WILLIAM A. WALLACE,
Chairman.

HOWELL COBB, who was Buchanan's Secretary of the Treasury, paid fifteen per cent. premium on a part of the National debt incurred by the Mexican war still unpaid, which he finally cancelled in order to leave the Treasury empty when he ran away to engage in the Rebellion, after borrowing money to meet pressing demands at twelve per cent in gold!—Republican.

Remember, all this took place, if at all, after the defeat of the Democrats in 1860, when the cloud of woe, debt, and taxation, that has since fallen upon the country, was hanging over us. It was about the time that Horace Greeley, then and now, the Radical leader, was advocating the right of Se cession, and when in this comm unity, it was common to bear the remark from Radicals —"Let the South go"—"We are better off without them."—"They are an expense t us"—"They cant be kicked out."

That the credit of the Government was low, is probable, but bear in mind it was all in consequence of the defeat of the great party that had so long ruled the Country, with such wisdom and success. Note the fact, moreover, how unwillingly the Republican has complimented Secretary Cobb—We are told that, instead of appropriating the money in the treasury to his own use, or that of his friends, as a Radical would have done; for fear it would be wasted or stolen, by the party coming into power, he actually took it and paid off the Bonds of the Government.

Grand Mass Meeting at Centralia.

The people fully determined to thrust their Oppressors from Power!

IN accordance with the announcement in the bills, the Democracy of Centralia and Conyngham township, assembled at the house of Robert Farrell in Centralia, on the afternoon of the 12th inst. The Democracy of Schuylkill was largely represented, and the Ashland Band also lent their aid to the glorious cause. Many Republicans were present on the occasion. After a grand procession through the town, the meeting was organized by electing Wm Torrey, Esq., President; W. S. Whittier, James Kealey, Robert Farrell, J. P. Hannon, Thos. O'Connor, Richard Thornton and Thos. Conor, Vice-Presidents, and C. G. Murphy, J. J. Coughlin and Wm. Bryson, Secretaries.

The President then announced Jas. Bryson, Jr., Esq., would address the meeting, and after loud and continued cheering, he in one of his mighty bursts of oratory, depicted in clear and unanswerable logic, the living issues of the campaign, and the unhappy results consequent on a renewed lease of Radical power.

Mr. Bryson's lofty style, natural gestures, extensive vocabulary, sublimity of thought, and elegant comparisons, place him on a level with the first spenkers of the State. He held the audience spell-bound and left the platform, encircled by a wreath, amid great enthusiasm.

Gen. Ent was then introduced and received with applause. He deliniated the object of the war, the inconsistency of Gen. Grant, and the violated pledges of Congress, with force and reasoning beyond refutation.

His appearance is pleasing, his manner courteous, and depend upon it the people of this end of the county will do their whole duty to make him their next Surveyor-General. He was followed by Lawyer Scott of Pottsville, who spoke at length on finance—onerous taxation, useless expenditures, increasing debt, unwise legislation, and proved beyond the shadow of doubt, that the party in power are unfit to conduct "the Ship of State" to the haven of peace, happiness and prosperity. His speech was nicely punctuated with hearty cheers.

At the call of the President three cheers were then given for Seymour & Blair, and three more for Gen. Eat and the State ticket, after which the meeting adjourned. C. G. M.

Fortieth Congress—Adjourned Session.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.

THE Senate was called to order at 12 o clock. Rev. Dr. Gray, Chaplain, in the course of his prayer, invoked the wisdom and grace needful to support members in their public duties, so that whatever course they pursue may meet the Divine approval and the sanction of the whole nation.

The Clerk commenced reading the Journal, but on motion of Mr. Edmunds, the further reading was dispensed with.

Mr. Anthony offered the following resolution:

Resolved, By the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring,) that the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives do adjourn their respective House until 12 o'clock, noon, on the 16th day of October, 1868; and that they then, unless otherwise ordered by the two Houses, further adjourn their respective Houses until the 10th day of November, 1868, at 12 o'clock, noon; and that they then, unless otharwise ordered, further adjourn their respective House to the first Monday of December, 1868, at 12 o'clock, noon.

On motion of Mr. Sherman there was a call of the Senate, when thirty-four members answered to their names—exactly a quorum.

Mr. Anthony stated that his colleague, Mr. Sprague, was not present, owing to illness.

The question was taken on the adoption of the resolution, which was agreed to—yeas 33, nays 1—Mr. Buckalew.

On motion of Mr. Anthony, at 12:15 the Senate took a recess for half an hour.

After the recess a message was received from the House that the latter had passed the resolution to adjourn to the 16th of October; if not then otherwise ordered, to the 10th of November, and then, unless otherwise ordered, to the first Monday of December.

Mr. Buckalew offered a resolution requesting the House to inform the Senate whether a quorum of members were present at the sitting to-day. He said he was informed there was not when that resolution was passed.

Messrs Anthony and Edmunds thought it would be discourteous to ask the House that question. It was presumed that the House could not put it without a quorum, and besides it was improper thus to inquire. The House resolution was concurred in and the President declared the Senate adjourned.

At one o'clock, while the roll was being called in the House, to get a quorum, a message was received from the Senate announcing the passage of the House resolution by that body, which instantly put a stop to the House proceedings. As both Houses having concurred in the resolution it was now a law. The House adjourned at ten minutes past one o'clock. The Senate adjourned previously. Only five Democrats were present in the House—Brooks, Randall, Eldridgr, Boyer, Haight; in the Senate only two Democrats—Buckalew and M'Creery. The latter came in after the Senate resolution had passed. Fully 120 members of the House were in the city and a quorum would have been found, if necessary, at the next Congress meeting.

SOLDIERS.—Vote against the party that for the sake and purpose of making the negro your equal, allowed thousands of your comrades to starve in the Andersonville prison.

POOR-MEN, Workingmen, now is your time to do justice to yourslves, by voting down the party that has oppressed you for the last seven years. Be true to yourselves, be true to the country.

WORKINGMEN.—Vote against the party that caused the War, caused the debt, caused the taxation, caused the high prices of all you eat, drink or wear.

Pennsylvania.

To this State the eyes of the country are now turned. Each party claims it for itself, and both are struggling desperately to make good its claim. Pennsylvania once a Democratic State for many years has been carried by the Republicans by large majorities. Last year the Democrats made a vigorous fight under the guidance of a most efficient Executive Committee. The result was the election of the Democratic candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court by 927 majority, the total vote of the State being 62,795 less than that of the previous year. Now comes the question, which party will secure next month a majority of these nearly seventy thousand votes? But thereare other questions to be decided by the canvass which are of more importance than the choice of the State officers; they are the election of representatives in Congress and a State Legislature, which latter is to choose a United States Senator in place of Hon. Charles R. Buckalew, whose term of office will expire on the 4th of March next. In the present House of Representatatives the Pennsylvania delegation is politicaly divided thus: Democrats, 6; Radicals, 18. At the election last year the Democrats carried all the districts which they carried in 1866 and four more, besides pressing the Radicals so closely in another district (the Tenth) that the result was a tie vote. They have, therefore, reasonable grounds for expecting to elect ten and perhaps eleven of their candidates for Congressmen, and thus secure a more honest representation on the floor of the House of Representatives than it has had in several years.

All the information that has reached us concerning the progres of the campaign in this State is full of encouragement. The Democrats have been and are working with commendable vigor and discretion. Their forces are well officered and thoroughly drilled; and unless some unexpected event occurs during the next three and a half weeks they will march over the field on the 13th of October, and at night-fall rejoice with their comrades in other State over the redemption of the Keystone State, and the consequent triumph of the cause Democratic party in November.—World.

Terrible Earthquakes.

A Dozen Cities Destroyed!—20,000 to 60,000 Lives Lost, and $300,000,000 worth of Property Distrbiged.

A TERRIBLE earthquake which has just devasted South America seems to have ranged from Port Conception, the southern coast of Chilli, up to Quito, the capitol Ecuador, just below the equator. The length of coast line affected by the several shocks is estimated at about 2,000 miles. The extreme distance from the sea coast into the interior, where the shocks were felt, is not known; but it is supposed that the devastation extended to the east of the Cordilleras. Peru, Ecuador, and Chilli are known to have ben the principal sufferers srom these great catastrophies. No advices have been received from Bolivia and the Argentine Republic. Mariners who had arrived at Peruvian Ports reported that vessels in which they rode were rocked by a fearful undulation far out at sea.

The total loss of life by these earthquakes, from the 13th to the 17th ult., was estimated to be from thirty thousand to sixty thousand lives!

The total loss of property was estimated at three hundred millions of dollars!

Over four hundred thousand people were deprived of shelter. Fifty large cities and towns, and more than two hundred smaller town and villages, are in ruins. The vast mineral province of Huancavelica, Peru, has been utterly devasted. The agricultural interests of the country, like those of Ecuador, and those parts of Chilli and Bolivia, are nearly destroyed; manufacturing, and other producing interests have also received an unprecedented shock; in the various ports of deposit all goods have been washed away or badly damaged, and hundreds of merchants are bankrupt.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

THOSE irreverent lads who called names after a certain "bald head" of old, deserved their untimely end, because at that time no panacea had been discovered to restore the human hair upon the bald spots. But now Ring's Vegetable Amerosia is known to possess the rare merit of invigorating the roots and filling them so full of life, where not entirely dead, that they cannot help putting forth a new growth which rivals in beauty the locks of youth.

The great amount of time consumed by the ladies in dressing and arranging their hair must make any article which would lessen their labor particularly desirable. Ring's Vegetable Amerosia has done the hair in such condition as to render the dressing and arranging a very easy matter. It imparts to it that splendid glossy appearance so much admired, cleanses the scalp from dandruff and all humors, and prevents baldness; promotes its growth and restores gray hair to its original color. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.

We are not in the habit of noticing so-called Patent Medicines; but we have no hesitation in commending this valuable Bitters to the public as is compounded in most but the purest and best ingredients, and the thousands of testimonials to its efficacy, leave no doubt that is the most valuable specific known for the cure of Diseases of the Liver, general Debility, Fevers, and complaints arising from a Disordered Stomach. The Bitters is entirely free from all intoxicating properties.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN TONIC

Combines all the ingredients of the Bitters with pure Santa Cruz Rum, orange, anise, &c. It is used for the same diseases as the Bitters, in cases where some Alcoholic Stimulant is necessary and makes a preparation delightfully pleasant and agreeable to take. Principal office, 631 Arch street, Philad'a, Pa. Sold everywhere.

ADDRESS TO THE NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED, the sufferings have been brought on from hidden causes, and whose cases require prompt treatment to render existence desirable. If you are suffering, or have suffered, from involuntary discharges, what effect does it produce upon your general health? Do you feel weak, debilitated, early tired? Does a little extra exertion produce a palpitation of the heart? Does your liver, or urinary organs, or your kidneys, frequently get out of order? Is your urine sometimes thick, milky, or ropey, or is it ropy on settling? Or does a thick scum rise to the top? Or is a sediment at the bottom after it has stood awhile? Do you have spells of short breathing or dyspepsia? Are your spirits unbalanced? Do you have spells of fainting, or rushes of blood to the head? Is your memory impaired? Is your mind constantly dwelling upon this subject? Do you feel dull, listless, sleepy, tired of company, of life? Do you wish to be left alone, to get away from everybody? Does any little thing make you start or jump? Is your sleep broken or restless? Is the lustre of your eye as brilliant? The bloom on your cheek as bright? Do you enjoy yourself in society as well? Do you pursue your business with the same energy? Do you feel as much confidence in yourself? Are your spirits dull and flagging, given to fits of melancholy? If so, do not lay it to your liver or dyspepsia. Have you restless nights? Your back weak, your knees weak, and have but little appetite, and you attribute this to dyspepsia or liver complaint?

Now, reader, sedulous, venereal disease badly cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs. The organs of generation, when in health, are what make the man. Did you ever think that those bold, defiant, energetic, persevering, successful business-men are always those whose generative organs are in perfect health? You never hear such men complain of being melancholy, or nervousness, of palpitation of the heart. They are never troubled; they cannot be, even in business they don't become sad and discouraged; they are always polite and pleasant in the company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face—none of your downcast looks or any other meanness about them. I do not mean those who keep the organs inflated by running to excess. These will not only ruin their constitutions, but also those they do business with or for.

How many have, from badly-cured diseases, from the effects of self-abuse and excesses, have brought about that state of weakness in those organs that has reduced the general system so much as to indnce almost every otherdisease—as dropsy, consumption, paralysis, blindness, and almost every other form of disease which humanity is heir to, and the real cause of the mischief never be suspected, and have doctored for ait but the right one.

Diseases of these organs require the use of a Diuretic. Heimbold's Fluid Extract Buchu is the great Diuretic that is a sure remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, Dropsy, Organic Weakness, Female Complaints, General Debility, and all diseases arising from Indiscretion, whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

If no treatment is submitted to, Consumption or Insanity may ensue. Our flesh and blood are supported from these sources, and the health and happiness, and life of Posterity, depends upon prompt use of a reliable remedy.

Heimtold's Extract Buchu, established upward of 18 years, prepared by H. T. Heimbold, Druggist, 594 New York, and 104 South 10th Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Price—$1.25 per bottle, or 6 bottles for $6.50, delivered to any address. Sold by all Druggists everywhere.

None are genuine unless done up in steel-engraved wrapped, with fac-simile of my Chemical Warehouse, and signed H. T. HEIMBOLD.
